"La Tosca" will be the offering at the Bijou Theatre this week, with Miss Edna May Spooner as Sardou's heroine. Hal Clarendon will play the villain and Augustus Phillips the part of the artist Mario.

Ther is an unusually attractive bill at Keeney's Theatre this week. Odette Tyler and her company appear in a clever comedy and ner company appear in a clever comedy sketch entitled "The Maid, the Mouse and the Man," and Miss Lillian Kraft, a Brooklyn girl, makes her début. Fanny Rice gives some of the songs and recitations for which she is famous, and there is a clever illusionist, three good singing comedians, and a new monologist on the programme.

Thomas E. Shea, in his repertoire of classic plays, comes to the Grand Opera House this week. He portrays Richelieu, the Polish Jew in "The Bells," and other of the rôles made famous by Irving and Richard Mansfield.

At the Gavety there is a collection of excellent vaudeville artists. The World Beaters Burlesquers are the feature of the programme. They present two lively burlesques.

"Tracked Around the World," a stirring meiodrama in which Georgie Mack, known as "the vest pocket Chauncey Olcott," appears, is to be played this week at the Folly. He can sing and his audiences never fail to like him, both as actor and singer.

Another successful musical comedy of Richard Carle's is the week's attraction at the Montauk. "The Tenderfoot" had a long run in Manhattan. In the cast are Edmund Stanley, Henry Norman, Francis Knight, Neille Lynch and Beatrice McKenzie, and there is a large chorus. The scene is laid on

At Hyde & Behman's Jessie Millward appears in her successful drama, "A Queen's Messenger." It is an exciting play of Russian life, dealing with the machinations of Clark's Runaway Girls, a famous aggregation, are to be seen this week at the Star. There is a strong vaudeville contingent, and the Marco Twins have been engaged as an extra attraction.

*Dealers in White Women," a melodrama of East Side life in New York, is to be played at the Park. It has drawn large audiences since its first production.

Robert Fitzsimmons and his company in a stirring play are to be seen this week at the Gotham.

Manager Watson at his theatre presents a vaudeville bill, with the Max Smith Duo, jugglers, in the front place.

The Novelty presents "Escaped From Sing Sing" for the week.

"Fabio Romani" succeeds "Jim Bludso" at the Columbia.

"What Happened to Jones" holds the stage this week at Payton's Theatre.

Fishing for Trout in Bavaria.

From Harper's Weekly.

One late afternoon the big head forester appeared on the stream where I was fishing. He carried a huge bamboo pole in one hand, a little tin pail in the other. For a little while he stood, watching me land one or two good fish. Then a peculiarly polite expression came over his face, and he begged to know if it would inconvenience me if he fished.

"No, indeed," I said quickly. "Where are you going to begin?"

"There," he replied, pointing to an incline "There," he replied, pointing to an incline over which the water rushed like lightning.

"You can't catch fish there," I said; for I did not believe it possible that a fish could maintain itself in such an avalanche of water, or that he could keep his bait from being swept to the bottom of the chute.

However, he tied on a chunk of lead, hooked a live minnow to the end of the rope which served as a line, and hurled bait and sinker into the foam. The sinker was carried a few yards down the incline, and finally stuck among the stones.

wards down the incline, and finally stuck among the stones.

"Now the gracious gentleman shall see what he shall see," observed the head forester; and the next moment, to my horror, he lifted bodily from the torrent a huge trout. The fish fell on the stones, bouncing like a football, the forester calmly gave it the coup de grace and lifted it on my pocket scales—five pounds less an ounce, and 21 inches long.

To see a noble trout of that size jerked from the element with a young tree for a pole and a cable for a line is peculiarly painful to any angler. But I said nothing; the good forester would not have understood. One thing, however, was certain—no trout of that size had ever even winked his eye at any fly I had thrown on the pools of the Red Valepp. Let the reader draw his own conclusions and point his own morals if he has any.
